

Her Potential Academic Spotlight: Meet Evangeline Buchenberger

Academic Journey and Career Plans

Evangeline is a second-year student in the Film Program at the Community College of Aurora and a two-time recipient of a Her Potential scholarship. After graduation, she plans to remain in Colorado for a year to pursue local film opportunities before moving to a larger market, such as Los Angeles.

“Being in a large market is invaluable as a screenwriter—you know what is being called into production long before the trailers hit theaters. Nothing in the film industry is concrete, but continuously participating in creative pursuits and putting yourself out there is the surest way to open doors.”

Creative Growth and Purpose

Most valuable class: Evangeline says her most valuable class to date has been Actor’s Process. “I never considered myself much of an actor. I soon learned, however, that understanding acting is an essential skill for a writer and director.”

Creative goal: She aims to create films that accurately represent and uplift women. “Women are often misrepresented in film, and the films I write explore the complexities of womanhood.”

Published Writing

Evangeline is also a published author. Explore her creative writing:

- “Soap” — Nowhere Girl Collective
- “Quentin Tarantino Is Not My Father” — Roadrunner Review

Film

Watch Evangeline’s film work on YouTube.